Hiring Team
Energy Ogre
Houston, TX

Dear Hiring Team,

Your Marketing Manager will decide what members hear from Energy Ogre and when, then turn what members say into proof and content no competitor can copy. That is writing and data working together, and it is the work I enjoy most.

Writing has been at the center of my work for my whole career, and I hold a master's in communication from the University of Houston. I have written launch and website copy, the NorthSky Supply blog, email and SMS programs, white papers, case studies and technical papers written alongside engineers. I use AI tools every day, and I know where they help and where they flatten a voice; nothing I publish goes out without my own edit.

Most recently, at NorthSky Supply, I was the lifecycle marketing manager who built the CRM, email and reporting for a new U.S. business and ran repeat-purchase campaigns timed to each customer's reorder window; they converted at 10 to 12 percent. Leadership ran the business from the dashboards I built, and paid-media return went from under 0.5 to over 5.0. At Raise3D, integrated campaigns and landing-page work lifted online conversions 30 percent. I have also marketed in a regulated category, running compliance-reviewed campaigns for a wealth-management firm, and I have directed outside creative agencies and vendors.

Reddit strategy and review programs at your scale would be new ground for me; reading what customers actually say and turning it into better messages is not. I will send writing samples with my application, including one written without AI and one made with it, with a note on what I changed. I live in The Woodlands and would welcome a conversation.

Sincerely,

Brad Sebastian
